World's Okayest American Football Player

Every coach needs a big playbook. This is a book of blank templates for you to fill. Unlike other similar books, this big 8.5 x 11 book utilizes the entire page for maximum strategizing potential. It has 116 blank football fields and 7 lined pages for notes. To the uninformed, football may appear like a violent game of mere brawn--no brains required. Without question, winning requires brute strength, raw speed, fearless confrontation, and lightning quickness. In the fourth quarter, the result is usually settled by the team who has trained hardest and wants it most. But football is also a grand chess match, a clash of wits, a coaches' game won in strategy sessions and in the "war rooms" where players learn the jobs they've been assigned. That's why every coach needs some big playbooks. This Big American Football Playbook is not a book of plays; it is a book of potential plays--120 pages of empty fields and notes for use in the strategic process. Getting a batch of them can prove useful as homework notebooks or tests for players, even as aids to record your team's stats or your opponents' strategies. For those coaching younger players--including parents introducing the game to their children--this playbook is also helpful in teaching the game (crayons may work best in that scenario!). Of course, you can always use an electronic tablet or white board while out on the field, but nothing seems to beat paper and pen, especially when batteries die, the sun shines too brightly, or the ink dries out in the heat. The solution? This Big American Football Playbook--a notebook we think is as brainy and brawny as the game itself.
