From cities to quaint towns and everything in between, Provence has something for everyone. Swim in the crystal clear waters of the Calanque de Sormiou in Marseille. Drive with the top down through fields of lavender in Valensole. Experience a bite of just-out-of-the-oven fougasse, a Provençal classic. Stand in awe of the beautiful, white Camargue horses native to the area. Located in the South of France, Provence is uniquely positioned to be a cultural blend of the Mediterranean. Roman landmarks still prevail from the 1st century AD alongside châteaux from medieval times—a varied legacy brightened by the indigenous mimosas and cypresses.

The text by Christiane Meunier, a professional in the field of fragrances, recounts the history of lavender. Readers learn that it has grown naturally in Provence since ancient times, when it was widely used to perfume bathwater. In the Middle Ages it was used medicinally and as a scent, and by 1900 farmers in the South of France had begun to grow lavender commercially. Today, as Silvester's photographs demonstrate, lavender appears as an integral part of the landscape of Provence, an essential element of its character and beauty.

Mistral is a portrait of Provence seen through its legendary wind. Photographer Rachel Cobb illustrates the effects of this relentless wind that funnels down the Rhône Valley, periodically gusting to 120 km per hour—hurricane strength on the Beaufort wind force scale. The region has, accordingly, adjusted to accommodate the mistral's impact. Some houses are built the traditional way, with few or no windows on the windward side and the main entrance on the sheltered side. Heavy stones hold down terra-cotta roof tiles. Rows of trees lining fields create windbreaks to shield crops. Cobb spent years chasing this capricious wind, challenging herself to photograph the invisible. As she became sensitive to its rhythms and effects, Cobb realized the mistral was not just a weather phenomenon; it was an integral part of the fabric of Provençal life. It was everywhere, yet always unseen. Mistral captures this invisible force of nature through its effects: a leaf caught in flight, a bride tangled in her veil, spider webs oriented to withstand the wind and grapes lashed by powerful gusts ("You can taste the wine better when the mistral blows," a Châteauneuf-du-Pape winemaker says). Writers have also tried their hand at conjuring this ungraspable phenomenon. Excerpts from writings by Paul Auster, Lawrence Durrell, Jean Giono and Frédéric Mistral are included in this volume, a luminous evocation of nature's unseen power.

Le best-off de la Provence : plus de 500 images spectaculaires d'une des régions les plus touristiques au monde. Quiconque a voyagé en Provence en connaît les paysages éblouissants de couleurs. Les bleus intenses des lavandes, l'or des tournesols, l'ocre des rochers et le gris vert si particulier des oliviers offrent une palette incomparable. Les villages perchés, les bastides au milieu des chênes verts témoignent d'un art de vivre ancré dans l'histoire. Les images de Gérard Sioen sont un raccourci saisissant de ce que peut être un voyage en Provence à travers les saisons et les régions : montagnes arides sculptées par le vent, rivières cascades au fond de gorges vertigineuses, campagne au petit jour avec ses petits villages émergeant de la brume, profusion éclatante des marchés, façades usées de soleil ou paisibles abbayes dans des prairies de lavande : il n'y manque que le chant des cigales.
